The Healer

This scenario is based on the Praedor setting by Petri Hiltunen and Ville Vuorela.

Story of a healer of adventurers.

Jaconia is a round shard of a world. A tiny part of what once was a great supercivilization called Borvaria. But they used too much magic and the cascade of open gates to another dimensions caused everything to come crashing down.

Only few wizards predicted the holocaust and created Jaconia through their protective magics. And even though the wizards do not die of old age, there are none left alive of the ones who saw the destruction.

But centuries pass and people go around their business. The wizards of Jaconia fought a civil war and the winners decided to draw themselves from the affairs of the mortals. And at least on the surface, the city states of Jaconia adopted mortal rulers and most of the wizards drew themselves to be isolated in the city of Circol. They let mortals dabble with alchemy, but active use of magic was prohibited and carried the penalty of death.

The city states evolved and nowadays they are approaching something that we would consider a renaissance. Northern states are the strongest ones, Farrignia as the proudest member, while the southern Jaconia is more or less lawless region of great forests and rivers. The outer edges of Jaconia consist of a vast desert. "Desert of the Wolf", is inhabited by the nomads of Jaconia. A mysterious people with living tattoos and own faiths.

But Borvaria still exists. Once a proud kingdom of super-magicians but now endless ruins filled by deadly wild magic and chaotic beasts. Since the tragedy there have been adventurers who wander across the magical barrier to find long-lost riches and items of ancient magic. Many of them die but some come back with a fortune. They are called Praedors.

In a strict hierarchy of Jaconian society Praedors are a caste outside of normal way of life. They are despised and persecuted by some, and in the same time used by nobles to do their dirty work elsewhere. Some of them have collected vast riches, but others spend it almost as quickly and end up right in the beginning.

Grains

- Borvaria is death
- There is no destiny
- Adventuring is corruptive

Britius the Healer

Britius a priest of Tiraman, and his faith is often frowned upon by the more dominant priests of Artante. But the praedors, of many who know his name and home in humble room near the great marketplaces of Farrignia do not care. They know him as "The Healer" and what he does can't be reproduced by the healing potions of the alchemists. He can help a man to face his past and cease the adventuring life of praedors. An adventuring that is most often ceased by death rather than a choice.
